

Chomsky (March 2017) on the real nuclear option, climate change & US

One of the things Chomsky has always done best is to collate and summarize current information from a wide range of sources, while sorting out what's important from what's propaganda, political distraction and drivel. This talk from March 2017 does just that, bringing together current (non-fake) news on nuclear war, climate change and Trumpism, keeping in mind one of the major questions of evolutionary biology, "Is it better to be smart or stupid?"
