

22Apr8 A Talk with Jack Loeffler, Part 2- Abbey, Kropotkin, Snyder, Dao de Ching, Decentralization, Flow of Nature, Egalitarianism, Biocentrism, Bioregionalism (Rewilding.org)

"Where I live, I go dance with 'em. Y'know and it's like that. I can hear and sense all of this stuff that is imbued with life, and what some people would think was inorganic like the rocks and yet, boy, I feel it. And that's one of the things that Ed said that he was an absolute, or almost absolute egalitarian, and that extended beyond the human domain, but included all living entities and even the rocks and the water and the air."

- Jack Loeffler

There are so many things of import in this interview that I wouldn't know where to start with an introduction, let alone where to end, so I'll just send it along with the note that in a very succinct and warmly human package it touches on a great swath of ideas that informed me and my sub(counter)culture, from mutual aid, cooperativist/communalist and anti-war politics to back-to-the-land, naturist/naturalist, panpsychist, sustainability ethics.

<https://rewilding.org/a-talk-with-jack-loeffler-part-2-ed-abbey-gary-snyder-decentralization-flow-of-nature-bioregionalism/>