

I Woke, Sand in Mouth and Eyes

I woke, sand in mouth and eyes
to see him switching himself under the moon. The speech of his arm was excellent:

each stroke a daughter of the god walking near him.

One of the water beasts
coughed from its dream.

Pale behind the mountains.
We would ride silent again.