

The Limbs Go Brittle

The limbs go brittle, the joints stiffen.
The ratted hair drops out leaving splotches of skin. The teeth soften to stumps of exposed nerve-endings, the eyes are easy prey to bees and flies. Ticks infest the ears and other openings. The nose goes blank or fumbles everything.
He paddles through the world deaf blind toothless alone.
The smell of it batters his brain.
